To know Joyce was to love her. She never met a stranger and was always interested in everyone she met. Her kind, genuine, sweet nature was shared with all who knew her.

Her love of travel carried her all over the world but the most important thing to her was not the destination or the journey, it was the love she had for her family. Nothing meant more to her than bringing everyone together any chance she could. She will be greatly missed beyond measure and we will always love her to the moon and back.
